CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

PETER CLANCY is Associate Professor of Political Science at St. Francis Xavier University. He has published a number of articles which reflect his research interest in comparative forest policy, the most recent being, "Formulating Standards for Sustainable Forest Management in Canada", (with Anders Sandberg), which appeared in Business Strategy and the Environment (1997). ANDERS SANDBERG is Associate Professor in the Faculty of Environmental Studies at York University. His co-edited (with Sverker Sörlin) book, Sustainability - The Challenge: People, Power, and The Environment will be published in the winter of 1998 by Black Rose Books. Since receiving his Ph.D. in history from the University of New Brunswick, BILL PARENTEAU has been involved in research which focuses on the political, social and environmental dimension of forest, fish and game resource use in the Atlantic region. He is currently employed as an archivist at the National Archives of Canada and as a part-time lecturer at Carleton University. SHEILA ANDREW is the author of The Development of Elites in Acadian New Brunswick (McGill-Queens, 1996). She is a member of the Department of History at St. Thomas University. JACQUES PAUL COUTURIER teaches history at the Edmundston campus of the Université de Moncton. A specialist in legal history, he is the editor, with Phyllis LeBlanc, of Économie et société en Acadie, 1850-1950 (Éditions d'Acadie, 1996). During the past three and a half years he has also served as Acadiensis' French language editor and it is largely as a result of his efforts that French language articles have appeared so very regularly in the journal during that time. A professional librarian, ARTHUR SMITH also holds a graduate degree from the Atlantic School of Theology. He is employed as a librarian at the Royal Ontario Museum. DAVID FRANK requires no introduction to readers of this journal. During his respite from editing, he has, among other things, introduced a course in "Canadian History on Film" at the University of New Brunswick. He returns as editor of Acadiensis with the Spring 1998 issue. CHERYL WARSH teaches history at Malaspina University College. The author of numerous articles which successfully integrate social and medical history, she is currently the editor-in-chief of the Canadian Bulletin of Medical History.
