Digital Media and Methods Section

"During the whole of my sickness I was nursed in a most devoted and affectionate manner by my maid Fanny. At times she actually kept over me... And yet - when I was scarce able to walk without assistance - she left me without provocation or reason - left me in the night, and that too without the slightest notice."

Catherine Breese Edwards
Paris, Civil War

She could not read between her own lines to find out why. To comprehend Fanny's history, one must read between the lines - indeed, between the pages. No one likes to be owned - that is why Fanny had to tear herself away. Everyone who is able to walk alone should do so.
